

The members of a truly secret society deny that the society exists at all, or at least deny that they're members. Freemasons do neither.