

There are “outward” secrets: details of ritual and signs of recognition, like passwords and handshakes. There are also “inward,” or personal, secrets, like the experience of passing through a ritual initiation, or what a man learns about himself through being a Mason.